PAULA NIOSI
President

To the Class of 1984:

For three years, I have had the great personal pleasure of serving as your class president. I am thankful for the opportunity to have worked with my fellow classmates in making our class a big success. Together, the Class of 1984 strived to develop strong characteristics that will be remembered in the future.

I would like to thank the class officers for their dedication to the class. On behalf of the class officers and myself, I would like to thank Mrs. Griffin for her support over the past four years.

In closing, I wish you all the best that life has to offer.

Paula Niosi

SCHOOL COMMITTEE — Front: Mrs. Joanne Blomstrom, Mrs. Rosana Molinari. Rear: Mr. John Dacey, Mr. John Donnelly Jr., Dr. Joseph Harrington.

Dear Members of the Class of 1984:

On behalf of the Stoughton School Committee, I would like to congratulate you on successfully completing your education at Stoughton High School.

The past several years have been rather bleak with the economy down, high unemployment, and proposition 2-½ and its effect on education. Many of you will go on to college and many will enter the business world and embark on your careers.

The outlook today on career opportunities is very bright with an improved economy. The decade of the eighties will see rapid growth and high technology and service oriented industries. Whichever path you choose to further your education or enter the job market, it will be an exciting time for you over the next few years.

You should feel proud of your accomplishments and fortunate to receive a fine education in the Stoughton Public Schools. Good luck in all your future endeavors.

Sincerely,

John L. Donnelly, Jr.
Chairman
Stoughton School Committee

To the Class of 1984:

There is clearly a uniqueness in the Class of 1984 in several ways: When you came to us as freshmen, we, as administrators, were faced with maintaining an academic level of excellence with a four percent restricted increase in our budget while at the same time Proposition 2½ was in the making. During the following three years, you weathered storms of serious staff and program cutbacks that we, as administrators, were forced to meet. At the mid point of your senior year, your Superintendent of Schools, Dr. John G. Murray, has been hospitalized with a serious illness and will be away from his desk for the remainder of your senior year. Continuous serious conditions such as these have plagued your class, yet those years have had no obvious deleterious effects, for you have persevered in the good old American tradition. You have held your heads up high and have come to this final graduation day with high scholastic standards, an atmosphere of great camaraderie, an excellent sports record, and a decrease in discipline problems and drop-out rate. Many of you are entering various post-secondary institutions in a broader range of areas than ever before.

You are, without question, a unique class. I commend you as young adults for your patience and understanding. I commend your teachers for their struggle to keep the academic standards at the same level of excellence despite severe budget restraints. I commend your parents who probably understood more than any of us what we were all going through, and I commend all of our ancillary staff who hung in there to maintain such areas as our cafeteria, our grounds and buildings, and who have continued to make Stoughton High School a pleasant place for us to spend our four years together.

As a class, you deserve a great deal of thanks and the very best of luck with the hope that your educational and "other" experiences during your past four years will allow you to prosper more fully.

May your years ahead be filled with good health, much happiness and great success.

As Acting Superintendent of Schools, I am truly happy to share this memorable graduation with you.

Sincerely,

Guy A. Tardanico, Ed.D.

To The Class Of 1984:

Congratulations on your graduation from Stoughton High School.

Over the past four years, you have displayed character, cooperative spirit, and academic and athletic ability. Many of you have taken advantage of the vast opportunities Stoughton High School has offered. The administration and staff are very proud of your accomplishments.

Your parents and teachers should also be congratulated. Their guidance and support during your high school career have made this special occasion possible.

In closing, may I extend to each graduate best wishes for your future success and happiness.

Sincerely,
Anthony L. Sarno, Jr.
Principal

DEDICATION

The 1984 Stotonian is not only a book to remember our senior year, but is a reflection on our entire high school experience. During our four years at SHS, there has been one individual who has planned with us, laughed with us, even sometimes fought with us, but always guided and cared for us.

During a time in education when funds for extra-curricular activities have been low, and skepticism in education has been high, one individual has stood by us. Too often, the extra efforts of teachers who give their time as advisors goes ignored. We did not want this to be so in the case of our class advisor.

With gratitude, respect, and great pleasure, the editorial staff of the yearbook has decided to dedicate the Senior Section of the 1984 Stotonian to Mrs. Ellen Griffin, our class advisor.

FOOTBALL

After opening the 1983 season with four straight losses, the varsity football team bounced back to beat Sharon 28-20 in one of the most exciting fourth quarters in SHS history. Losing 20-0 with just seven minutes to go, the Knights rallied to score four TD's and put away the sweet win. Mark Arnold was brilliant on offense and Paul Kimball made some key defensive plays. Unfortunately, they went on to lose their remaining games. Each was hard fought with the outcome questionable until the last minute of play. Seniors Bill Whittington and Jim Overstreet teamed up for some outstanding passing plays; Captains Scott Breen and Tony Novello played super on both offense and defense. SHS was edged 29-15 by Canton in the 58th game on Thanksgiving; as a result, Canton now has the edge in the rivalry, 28-27-1.

The freshmen had a highly-successful season, winning nearly all their games. Safety Pat Donnelly, center Kevin Murphy, tight end Brad Miller and Jeff Winn all played well. Jeff Teplitz scored several key touchdowns.

John Wirrell received honors as a league selection to the Southern Conference All-Star Team. Janet Lee and Monica McKinnon both placed in the top 15 at the Sectional Diving Championships, and Sue Cody was selected as recipient of the Most Valuable Player Award by her teammates.

GOLF

The golf team finished at even par with a record of 7-7-2. Although they were looking forward to a better season statistically, action and fun on the course rose above expectations. The return of Chris Gill was a great part of this success. The team was coached by Chuckie Vuytowecz, who instructed the team well and created a comfortable atmosphere. Four seniors, Gill, Ger Walsh, Boo Stevens, and Shady Brady led the team. Gill won the Brockton City Open and was also voted a Hockomock League All-Star. Walsh was the team's Most Valuable Player. Stevens played well in his first season as a team member, and Brady kept everyone laughing with his crazy antics.

The departing seniors offer congratulations and wish good luck to Mike "I wish I could win a match" Foley, David "I can hold a lead" Halperin, and Mark "the Stan" Musial.

SOCCER

The varsity soccer team had a record of five wins, six losses and one tie. This is not an indication of the hard work and determination exerted, however. The team performed with a "never say die" attitude. Coach Michael Stuber helped the young team through an injury-filled season, offering helpful encouragement constantly. Co-captains Buddy Lamplough and Eddie Freitas provided inspirational leadership.

The team was able to defeat Sharon, North Attleboro and Oliver Ames. They challenged successful teams such as Franklin and Foxboro by staying within a single goal of the lead. Awards were given to Meeny Valeros, most improved; Chris Marshall, offenisve player; Willy Herrmann, Defensive player; Buddy Lamplough, Hockomock All-Star; and Eddie Freitas, most valuable player.

Under the leadership of JV Veliotis and Junior Bunson the Cross Country team achieved a record of 7-1 and a Hockomock League Co-championship with North Attleboro. Paul Medieros '85 finished first in every meet but one, and was selected as a Hockomock League All-Star. Eric Saperstein, also a league All-Star, placed sixth in the league meet. The team members in the next six positions also performed well. Veterans Mitch Dmohowski, Veliotis and Bunson showed strong dedication. First year runners Scott Weiss, Mike McNamara and Brian Plunkett rose above expectations with fine performances. Credit must be given to Coach John Hurley for his expert advice, and John "Beak" Veliotis, who was voted most valuable player by his teammates. The girl's cross country squad was led by Lisa Donoghue, who was voted team MVP. Although the team's 1-7 record was a disappointment, the record did not reflect the hard work which was contributed by each member. Stacey Berdos, Tina Veliotis, Maria Novello and Madeline Mace comprised the first girls' team ever at Stoughton High. Coach Don Bernier was impressed by the team's effort, and looks forward to a promising future.

The members of the boy's cross country team designed a new course before the start of the season at Muddy Pond. This will be known for many years to come as "the terror of the league."

The varsity field hockey team compiled its best record in recent years: 10-3-3. The team was led by three spirited captains, Linda Pellegrino, Michelle Davis, and team high scorer, junior Dianne Blomstrom. They went on to post-season play for the first time in Stoughton's history, competing in the State Tourney.

In two seasons as head coach, Dan Mark has brought the team from the cellar of the Hockomock League to second place. Mark's team played strongly throughout the season. The season's highlight came against league power Oliver Ames, when sophomore Sheila Jackman tied the game in the final minutes. Coach Mark is looking forward to next season with great anticipation.

BOYS BASKETBALL

The basketball team finished the season with a 13-9 record and a tournament berth. The team lost to Newton South, 81-69, in the quarterfinals after a dazzling victory over heavily favored Hanover in the preliminary round.

The talented Knights sent three players to the Hockomock League All-Star game: Roy Fralin, Captain Jim Overstreet and Steve Teplitz. Fine performances were turned in by Ed Statkiewicz (21 points against Hanover), junior Pete Fredericksen, and Mitch Dmohowski, who improved greatly in four years of high school play. Assistance came from a solid bench corps consisting of Ger Walsh, Joe Lewis and the hustling Mark Arnold. Denis Donaghue and Russ Stevens performed well as role players.

The Knights crushed first place Foxboro in a late season grudge match to highlight the year. Overall, Stoughton lost six league games by a total of 13 points. A 12-6 league record and a second place finish were not indications of the team's capability.

WRESTLING

The Black Knight wrestling team completed its second consecutive .500 season with a record of 8-8-1. Captains John Fischera, Edward Daly, and Jeff DiMatteo led a hard-working squad against some lauded opponents, and the team performed well against their foes. Bill Lunnin, Jeff DiMatteo, and Neil Baker tied for the most pins with eight, and Baker recorded the most team points with 71.

The team placed sixth in the Catholic Memorial Tournament. DiMatteo placed first in his weight class, Neil Baker finished third and heavyweight Lunnin finished fourth. A seventh place finish at the Sectional Tournament in Division I South was paced by Mark Williamson, who finished fifth in his class, followed by DiMatteo in fourth, Baker in third at 128 pounds, Rick Alterio in sixth, and Lunnin in fourth place. At the State Tourney, Lunnin finished fifth and Baker sixth.

This year's hockey season was somewhat disappointing. The team recorded a 2-17-1 season. Even with senior captains Tim Bishop, Anthony Novello, and Scott MacKenzie trying their luck at forward, the right combination could not be found. Highlights of the season were a 10-1 victory over North Attleboro, a 3-2 win over King Phillip and a 4-4 tie with Southeastern. The Black Knights were a hard-hitting team but could not put the puck in the net. Defenseman Scott MacKenzie was named to the Hockomock League all-star team.

The junior varsity was much more successful with impressive victories over Duxbury and Milton.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

A young SHS girls basketball varsity performed creditably and managed to achieve a 9-11 record for the year. The girls scored an average of 46 points-per-game against 49 for their opponents. Highlight of the season for Coach Warner Bucklin's team was an underdog win over Canton, a tournament team. Four seniors provided leadership to the young players: Sue Blomstrom, an Hockomock all-star, co-captained the quintet with Linda Pellegrino, a steady defenseman and an emotional leader; Sheri Rosenthal had a good year. A tall, six-footer who joined the Knights with seven games to go, Janine Powell, impressed enough to be named to join a touring AAU team at the conclusion of the season. Dawn Young and Diane Blomstrom were two underclass players; they, together with Tara Donnelly, Nicole Murphy, Cathy Doyle, and Katie McShea, provide much promise for next year. Also returning will be stars Marie Pellegrino, the second leading scorer and best offensive player with a 43 per cent scoring average and Sheila Jackman, a key playmaker.

Although the subvarsity record was only 7-13, it provided excellent training, under Coach Dave Tucker to several sophomores and freshmen who had not benefitted from a junior high program. Joining the varsity next year will be Tina Doucette, Amy Cotter, and Sue McNamara. With a strong, returning group and with the re-introduction of junior high basketball, SHS girls basketball should improve over the next few years to its previous top status.

INDOOR TRACK

Winter track rose from the grave in 1983-84 to field the first team since 1981. The team was abolished three years ago due to budgetary cuts. Rookie coaches Joe Dawe and John Schillinger brought a competitive atmosphere to an inexperienced squad, and captains Brian Plunkett and Lisa Donaghue provided veteran leadership.

The team finished the season with a 2-3 dual meet record in a powerful league. Sprinter Brian Lanner was high scorer for the boys, and Nancy Soares was the top runner for the girls. Solid performances were turned in by Eric Saperstein, Johnny Bloom, Junior Bunson, JV Veliotis, Mike McNamara, Jamie Borr, and Alex Dijak. Brian Plunkett placed third in the 300 at the MIAA State Championship meet. Plunkett and Lisa Donaghue were voted MVP by their teammates.

Lou Modestino '85 is Stoughton High's top power-lifter. He has won several awards for his feats of strength.

GYMNASTICS

Unfortunately, a small gymnastics squad, despite its best efforts, was unable to come up with any wins and ended the season with an 0-11 record. Highlight of the season included a high score of 101.3 against Sharon. In the league meet, the gymnasts finished fourth. The addition of a highly-qualified coach, Ray Crane, provides some hope in turning the gymnastics program around in the next few years. Coach Crane, assisted by Nancy Kates, has been of great value in helping some of the young SHS performers to improve individual talents. Laura Loring and Christine Rush served as leaders to the freshmen and sophomores on the team. In the league meet, freshman Michelle Kelley came in 6th in vaulting for individuals, Fran Costello was 5th on the bars and Madeline Mace ended 2nd on the balance beam. Kim Romaine rounded out her efforts with a 5th place finish in the all-around event.

Our snack bar ladies, Mrs. Lynch and Mrs. Simms, are always happy to serve us.

MORE FOOD FOR THOUGHT — "(People) lose their tempers in defending their tastes." (EMERSON)

"Food Is a Weapon!"

Long ago when the word "lunch" was coined, it referred to a time of day reserved for eating and drinking. Stoughton High students have distorted the meaning of "lunch."

After a grueling morning of classes, students utilize a meager twenty minutes to do their math homework, lounge in the luxurious cafeteria chairs and, most of all, to socialize. Groups of peers crowd nine people into tables built for four. People wander and talk freely in a treasure chest for idle conversation. Often, a student's lunch remains untouched.

But let's not forget the nutritious complete meals which we may purchase for a paltry 75 cents and the junk food which deprives our pockets of idle change. Fruit pies, pretzels, chips and swiss rolls fill our guts with either energy to continue, or heartburn to make us miserable.

Paul Masalsky
Editor in Chief

Several years from now, when resting from the daily toil of adulthood, you will begin to reminisce. You will recall a time in your adolescence which has long since past, a time of togetherness and bliss. As the memories take you slowly into a peaceful slumber, your hand will unconsciously reach forward to catch the shades of youth floating by. Suddenly you will stir, only to find that your old high school yearbook has entered the palm of your hand. As you flip through the pages, the dreams begin to linger once again.

We have many dedicated staff members to thank for preserving our memories in this product of our fruitful imaginations. "The Weary Staff" labored relentlessly to meet the deadline, hampered by the brief absence of our dedicated advisor, Mr. Sumner Tapper. Upon Mr. Tapper's return, things began to flow smoothly under his knowledgeable guidance. We owe our sincere thanks to him. The laborers are as follows: Dave Pires and Larry Yarmaloff, who were responsible for superior coordination of copy and photography; Marc Zade, Merry Bowman, Sheri Woolf and Joe Waters, who coordinated one of the most successful business staffs in Stotonian history; John Parker, Stacey Berdos, and Mike McNamara comprised a persistant advertising staff; Mike Dmohowski and Bill Mootos donated their creativity as avid artists; our sports editors, Brian Plunkett and Ed Daly, for occasional genious in that field; our photographers, Dan Aronson and Gary Rudman, for "tons" of pictures; and last, but not least, Tricia Sweeney, who produced an outstanding senior section and brightened our work days with sarcastic exchanges with Mr. Tapper.

Times may change, and so do we. The past, however, can never be altered. It is stored in our hearts. Let the 1984 Stotonian become a part of your heart, and never forget the times we have shared together. You are the best, and we have done our best for you . . . let's be careful out there . . .

STOUGHTON HIGH SCHOOL

PRICE: $4.00

As We Go To Press...

We Mourn...

With deep regret we report the death, by drowning, of Christine Ambrosio Class of '84. We offer our deep condolences to the bereaved family and friends of this lovely young lady.

We Apologize...

The Stotonian staff acknowledges with thanks the many praiseworthy comments about the '84 Stotonian. We do regret and apologize for any errors of omission and commission that may have cropped in by inadvertence. If we spelled your name wrong, identified a picture incorrectly or in any way erred, we are deeply sorry. Certainly no error was intentional.

Girls Do It Again

SHS girls' tennis retained its Division II South sectional championship by defeating Bishop Feehan 4-1. It was no "laugher" as the girls had to come from behind in an intensely fought match.

We Salute

Mr. Sumner Tapper, advisor to student publications, received special honors on June 9. The Norfolk County Teachers Association presented him with an honor award for "significant service to the teaching profession."

FRIENDSHIP

Twelve years go by so fast. None of these years has gone by any faster than the ones spent in high school. For all, they have been a time of great joy and great pain. Triumph and tragedy. But despite this paradox, one thing has remained constant—friendship!

Sociologists call it the process of socialization, the process in which we become people in terms of our culture. One of the primary places this occurs is in the school. It is not simply the book learning that allows us to become "us." It is the people we are in contact with. It is through our friends that we first learn to see ourselves. This occurs in earlier schooling. So that in the years from elementary to high school, we allow our friendships to become deeper.

When underclassmen are asked about graduation, the response is generally that it's a time of great happiness and time to "get out of this place." But if a senior is asked, usually the answer is quite different. For most, while a time of anticipation, it is also a time for true sadness. Is it because they're leaving the classrooms, the buildings, perhaps Stoughton? No, it's because they'll be leaving friends. This can be scary, since friends are so important to us. And while some people may find it hard to believe that anything but joy could be felt at the prospect of leaving Stoughton High, that is quite often not the case. Witness the tearful hugs on graduation night, knowing that perhaps friends for four years may never see each other again.

Perhaps the single most important thing we as a generation have learned is tolerance. We now have friends that 20 or more years ago, most of us couldn't or wouldn't have had. This opens us up in so many ways. Friends are being made on the basis of who that person is, not on what that person is. This allows for good friendships now and hope for the future. If we can become the kind of people we have learned to be in high school, we have made a better world for ourselves the rest of our lives.

While actually in school, it can often look like an awful place to be. But in hindsight, one can say that as bad as it's been, it's probably a place a person wouldn't want to trade for anything else. School and the people in it become our extended family, one that can be as important as our real families. This can make us vulnerable in many ways, but it can also bring so much comfort and joy.

For now, you can be content in the thought that choosing life beyond school will be exciting. You will be attending college, entering the workforce, or becoming parents. At a reunion ten years from now, you may forget someone's name but you'll instinctively know what that person is and how much he or she meant to you. That's because the friends we make in high school can never truly be forgotten. For while we must always look towards the future, the memories of the friendships will always remain with us.

Sports Update

COACH OF THE YEAR: Bob Ashley, SHS varsity baseball coach, was named Division 2 coach of the year by the Globe. "Ashley has been successful in all his coaching ventures," the Globe said. "An 18-2 regular season mark this year and the Hockomock League championships are his accomplishments this spring.

"Last year his Stoughton club captured the Division 2 South and the Eastern Mass. Division 2 titles.

"He has a career mark of 204-56 in eight years of coaching (four years at Stoughton). Ashley had a successful high school career at Apponequet, playing basketball, baseball and football, captaining the latter two his senior year."

GIRLS' TENNIS: Doubles victories by the teams of Dianne Blomstrom and Tina Galley, and Maureen and Patty McGowan offset losses by Sue Blomstrom and Carole Zelbow as the Black Knights girls' tennis teams defeated Bishop Stang in Division II South Sectional quarterfinal action on June 5 in Stoughton.

RECORD: S. Blomstrom 6-4, 3-6, 3-6; Maura Tector 6-3, 6-1; Zelbow 2-6, 7-5, 5-7; D. Blomstrom and Galley 6-0, 6-0, 6-2; M. McGowan and P. McGowan 6-0, 2-6, 6-3.

SOFTBALL: On June 5, at home, the softball team lost in opening Division I tournament action to Bishop Feehan 6-1. A six-run rally in the top of the second inning, five of which were unearned, cost SHS the game. The Knights scored their only run in the third inning, when Dawn Young tripled and scored on a grounder by Mary Fitzgerald.

Marie Pellegrino took the loss for Stoughton despite a strong performance—four hits, two walks, and four strikeouts over seven innings.

Spring Sports

Ah, spring!

'Tis the season to be jolly, for Christmas has come early for the Stoughton High sports teams. After a dismal winter, Santa has come out of hibernation, bringing tidings of four league championships in his bag of goodies.

Athletic Director Ray O'Malley couldn't be happier. He feels, however, that better performances from fall and winter teams could have augmented the feeling of success. "The success of the spring teams is a great jump for the athletic department," O'Malley says, "but spring sports don't carry a high school. We must now develop our fall and winter programs to achieve complete success."

The members of the varsity baseball, softball, boys' tennis and girls' tennis teams can't relax and enjoy the laurels which have been bestowed upon them. The teams must prove their credibility for a second time in upcoming tournament action.

(ED. NOTE: This column was prepared on June 1.) Whatever the results, Stoughton's domination of the Hockomock League can be considered nothing less than outstanding.

Baseball

It is difficult to find superlatives to describe the 1984 varsity baseball team. After crawling to a 4-2 record in the early season, the talented team's ability to win was questioned by both cohorts and adversaries alike. Pressured to follow in the footsteps of the 1983 Eastern Mass. Championship team, the Knights strove to meet their expectations. Their answer: fourteen straight wins and another league title.

"After losing two straight games, I told the team that I wanted them to have fun at any cost," said coach Bob Ashley. "Even if we ended at 10-10, I told them the season would still be a success if we had fun. So they just went out and had fun."

The Black Knights had fun by trampling over the opposition by such scores as 20-1, 29-1, and 16-2. They disposed of arch rival King Philip by a 4-2 score, building a two-game lead over the nearest competitor. Team statistics included a .372 batting average and a .934 overall fielding percentage.

"We try to play with a lot of intensity," said Ashley when asked to comment on the team's success. "Last year's playoff series caused the players to mature and realize how talented they are. The kids committed themselves to winning every game they played."

Stoughton's pitching staff is comprised of the three top hurlers in the Hockomock League. Scott Carlson, Ed Statkiewicz and Jim Overstreet, each posted ERA's of under two runs per game. Dave Murphy, second in league hitting, batted .478 with 37 RBI. First baseman Tim Bishop and center fielder Mike Wiseman posted averages over .400.

Softball

"The main thing I was trying to do was to achieve a lot of cooperation," says Coach Mike Baxter of the Hockomock League champion girls' softball team. "We saw a lot of improvement in all areas, especially pitching."

Baxter speaks modestly. "Improvement" could be replaced by "complete reversal" when referring to the 13-3 Black Knights. After landing in the league cellar in the previous season, the squad wasted no time in making their presence known to a competitive field.

Marie Pellegrino led an efficient pitching staff with a 13-2 record and nine team members contributed handily at bat with averages over .300. Sister Linda Pellegrino hit .395, second only to Marie's .447 clip. Tina Doucette, Robyn Dray, Julie Freeman, Amy Cotter, Mary Fitzgerald, and Debbie Mythen had fine seasons for the Knights.

Tennis

After dropping two close matches due to injury, the boys' tennis team rebounded with late season victories over arch-rivals Sharon and Foxboro to put away the league championship. It was the first such distinction for rookie coach David Tucker.

The Knights battled to overcome an early lead posted by league co-champ Sharon. The dynamic singles duo of Andy and Scott Berler led the team. Scott returned from a wrist injury to go undefeated, while Andy maintained an excellent record throughout the season. "E" Hoffman played consistently well at third singles, and the doubles teams of Dan Aronson with Boo Stevens, and Bill Rossi with Craig Spurr provided solid play in pressure situations.

It was business as usual for the girls' tennis team. The lady Knights volleyed to an unblemished 16-0 mark, capturing their third straight Hockomock League title and a top "seed" position in the post-season tournament. For lack of a better word, the team can be considered a "family." The team members have been playing together since their sophomore years, when Stoughton High's eyes were opened to girls' tennis.

"I think the experience factor has reached its peak with this team," remarks second year coach Russell Clough." The girls play like true athletes in every match, never compromising on hard work."

Sue Blomstrom and Maura Tector played to undefeated seasons at first and second singles. The doubles team of Diane Blomstrom and Tina Galley was also perfect at 16-0. These achievements should not overshadow the fine work of Carole Zelbow at third singles and the doubles team of Patty and Mo McGowan. All of the players contributed to a strong team depth others could not overcome.

TRACK

Although the boys' and girls' track teams were unable to post winning records, stellar individual performances brought proper recognition to the athletes.

The relay team of Eric Saperstein, Brian Plunkett, Brian Lanner and Ed Daly participated in the All-State meet at Boston College. Daly competed in the pole vault at the All-State meet, after placing fourth at the Eastern Mass. States competition.

The girls' relay team of Monica McKinnon, Sue Hurley, Corey Dacey and Kim Romaine set a new Class B record at the Regional Finals. The team also competed at the All-State meet.

Although boys' coach Don Bernier was impressed with these post-season performances, he was disappointed with the team's 3-5 dual meet record. "We shouldn't have lost a few important meets. We got bad breaks and when one group had an off day, everyone had an off day. Basically we geared the kids toward the post-season, hoping for success in those meets."

Capt. Brian Plunkett led the team with an undefeated season in the 330-low hurdles, and lost only once in the 400-meter run. The team's great strength came with the addition of Dave Barbato as distance coach. The distance men performed consistently well behind the leadership of Capt. John Veliotis, Junior Bunsen, Flash Medeiros and Chris Veliotis. Underclass prospects such as Jamie Borr and Bill Kane provided strength in the field events.

The girls' team struggled to a 4-4 dual meet record, hampered by injuries to some top runners. The Knights were paced by Corey Dacey's consistent hard work in the long jump, and Madeline Mace's steady improvement in the javelin. Lisa Donaghue, Stacey Berdos and Nancy Soares performed well in the distance events.

"We had problems with self-confidence and team cohesiveness," first year coach Chris Brady comments. "We tried to establish a good team attitude throughout the season and team spirit finally emerged in the post-season."

JV

The junior varsity softball team battled to a 12-4 record this spring. The team was paced by the strong pitching of Heidi Sacks, who contributed handily to the last three wins. Cathy Homer provided power in the batting department. Chris Fogarty and Tracey Aguiar excelled in the field and on the basepaths.

Coach William Rudder was impressed with the spirit his team members displayed despite having a poor season statistically. "The inclement weather hampered us at the start, and we progressed slowly. Near the end of the season, we established a feeling of team togetherness."

CHARLES TUCKER

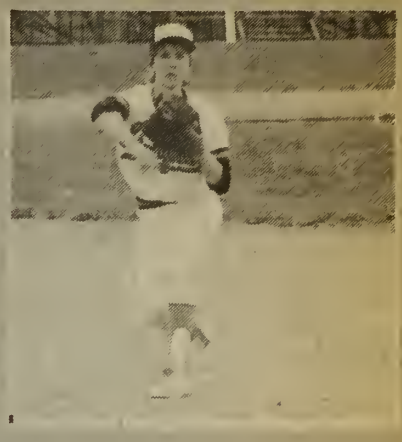
I took my position at first base, neatly cultivating the infield dirt with my feet as I awaited the monotony of daily practice. While creating a comfortable cloud of dust, I proceeded toward second base, where a ray of sunshine enlightened the somber playing surface. I discovered a simple message inscribed in the dirt, ironical in its eloquence. The words said, "I love you, Charles!"

Charles Tucker played second base.

Charles' girlfriend had been here only a short time ago, having etched the bold, capital letters in the dirt with a stray branch. The words resembled the feelings conveyed by the old tradition of carving a sweetheart's initials in oak trees. How nice Charles Tucker must be to warrant such emotions, I thought to myself. What a guy he must be to have someone care for him so much.

I ceased cultivating the dirt with my feet, preserving the message in all its splendid simplicity. This small token of thoughtfulness will mean so much to Charles when he practices later with the junior varsity team, I thought.

As the varsity team relinquished the field, I saw Charles take his position at second base. I had anticipated correctly the smile of warmth when he discovered the message. The rest of the team smiled along with him. After absorbing the impact of the thought behind the words, he cleared the message and got ready to play. It was time for practice. Hard work would come now, time with those he cared for would come later.



Those who did not know Charles Tucker too well, like myself, nevertheless admired his amiability and thirst for life. He could brighten the most cloudy of moments with his winning smile, and create happiness in times of remorse. We can only comfort those who were close to him, for they truly experienced his charm and kindness. For all of us, our memories of this fine young man are as timeless as that message scrawled in the infield soil:

We'll always love you (and your memory), Charles.

Baseball

ALL SCHOLASTIC . . . On June 5, the Boston Globe named Jim Overstreet as Player of the Year for Division 2 in baseball. The Globe said, "Not too many people could forget Overstreet's hitting and pitching performance in last year's EMass Division 2 tournament where he copped the MVP award for the tourney."

"Overstreet hit .351, and the three-year starter was also outstanding with a 1.63 ERA and 65 strikeouts in 54 innings.

"He is also captain of the basketball and football teams and member of the basketball and baseball all Hockomock League teams."

Divisional (II) All-Stars named by the Globe included Dave Murphy, catcher; Tim Bishop, infielder; Mike Wiseman, outfielder.

LEAGUE CHAMPS

BOYS' TENNIS: At Stoughton on June 5, the Knights rebounded from an 0-1 deficit with victories in singles by Scott Berler and Eric Hoffman and doubles by Russ Stevens and Dan Aronson, and Craig Spurr and Bill Rossi, ousting Dartmouth (4-1) from the Division II South tournament.

The season for boys' tennis came to a halt in quarterfinal action on June 6 when the Knights dropped a close match to Marshfield 3-2. The match went down to the last contest, a doubles contest involving the SHS duo of Bill Rossi and Craig Spurr. Victory by the doubles combo of Aronson and Stevens had tied up the competition 2-2, as the Knights had been able to salvage only one point (a win by Scott Berler) in the singles matches.

Rossi-Spurr took the first set but lost the second. After spotting the Rams 3-1 in games in the final set, the SHS pair came back to tie 3-3, but the opponents broke service twice to win set, match, and end the season for the locals.

COMMENCEMENT

June 3, 1984

Not the Hollywood Bowl, but a panorama view of the crowd which filled the Adams St. parking lot not only to finally see the Class of 1984 graduate, but to dedicate a "new" site for graduation.

They put into words what others thought. (Twins Dan and Donna McLeod rejoin their classmates.)

Principal Anthony Sarno brings over the coveted diplomas, while School Committee member Mrs. Peggy Sewcyk awaits her turn. Rev. Mr. Roy Fralin (Methodist Church) sits and waits, camera ready, for son Roy to make his appearance.

Stoughton's stellar concert band (or at least the undergraduate portion of it) does the "pomp and circumstance" bit under the baton of director Ron Christianson.

The big moment has arrived. Sue Blomstrom followed by Ron Boncorrdo, wait at foot of stairs ready to be called for diplomas.

Days of torrential rain causes three postponements in the 1984 graduation. Seats were set up in the Adams St. parking lot (the superintendent's side) and for a while it seemed that even they would be washed away.

Utterance of the Reaper
By Joseph Masalsky

I

James Foster had never been to Chicago. It seemed that he had been everywhere else though, always on the run. One mistake, and they had followed him from coast to coast for ten long years. They had never caught up to him, and he'd be damned if he'd let them get him now. Too close last time—actually had hold of his arm! But having gotten away then, he would get away now.

He needed some rest. He'd been going nonstop for forty-eight hours and was tired and hungry. On the other side of the crowded bus terminal he spotted a row of vending machines. He really wanted an Almond Joy.

Pushing his way through the crowd of early morning commuters, he found himself brushing past many families that reminded him of his own family, the family 'they' had destroyed. He no longer thought about his family. James had been kept occupied with other things.

James' heart dropped when he saw that the machine was sold out of Almond Joys. With a kick he proclaimed, "Damn you, (United Vending Machine Company!") and settled for a Mounds. It just wasn't the same without the nuts.

The first stroke of good luck he had had today was finding an empty seat in the waiting area. Must have just called a bus, he figured. Slumping down in the cracked plastic chair, he unwrapped his candy. There was a game card inside, in between the candy bar and the cardboard. He scratched it off to reveal the message, "You have won $1,000!" "Must be my lucky day," he muttered and discarded the slip in the rubbish, certain in the knowledge that to call attention to himself would mean his death.

He had not even finished chewing the first bite when a deep voice shouted, "James Foster," from behind him. He reeled around, as did many of the others waiting for buses, to see a huge man dressed all in black. He had the build of a football player but his face cound not be seen because a wide-brimmed hat cast a shadow over his features.

"Die," he said very calmly, and at that very moment James Foster was dead.

II

The door to Adam Donaldson's office swung open without making even the slightest noise. If he had looked up, he would have seen the man walk in and stand just beside his desk.

You wanted to see me, Adam?

Adam looked up from his paperwork in surprise.

"Jesus, L.A., don't you even cast a shadow? You nearly scared up my lunch." He was speaking to Louis Arthur Drake, an average-sized man with an excellent build. He had the type of face you'd notice when you saw it, but would have a difficult time remembering later. That was the way he liked it. He wore a black suit and a blue scarf which begged for a matching hat, but he never wore a hat.

"You are much to jumpy, Adam. Perhaps you should cut down on your sodium." Adam discarded the remainder of his corned beef sandwich. "Or perhaps you would feel more secure with a more observant secretary. If I were a disgruntled hood, you'd be dead right now.

"So you've told me everytime you've come here." Adam cleared his desk and slid over to the file cabinet behind him. "I think I have something that's right up your alley, Louis."

"It's been a while since you've given me anything genuine, Adam." Louis pulled a chair up to the desk.

"I'm a district attorney, Louis. It's not my job to weed out the crap. You investigate it and tell me whether or not it's genuine. If not, I'll let the police handle it." He opened the file and took out a large glossy still. "That's a picture of James Foster of Hoboken. New Jersey." Louis took the picture. "He's been missing for ten years, the prime suspect in the murder of his wife, mother, and four children.

"A real family man."

"Well, anyway, he turns up in the Lincoln Street depot yesterday morning about 5:30. Then, out of nowhere, this big guy walks up to him and tells him to die. So he does. Then the big guy leaves."

"Talk about letting other people run your life."

"Well, what do you say, Louis, you want it or not?"

"What did the autopsy say?"

"That guy checked out better than I did on my last physical. He shouldn't be dead."

"People have been known to scare themselves to death before. Nothing occult about that."

"I don't have time to discuss this, Louis. I've got a meeting with the mayor in seven minutes. You want it or not?"

"Sure. It could prove interesting." He grabbed the file off Adam's desk. Adam got up and went over to the hook where his coat was hung. "Just try to get me something more exciting next time."

Adam turned. "I'll see what I can. . . Now where the hell did he go?" He was seriously thinking of beefing up security around his office.

III

If one thing could be said about being an investigator of occult occurrences, you did a lot of traveling.

Once in Ecuador, Louis had come in contact with a group of people who could kill with their minds. However, they did it in a much more conventional psychic manner, by tearing the heart out of the chest. If if was psychic experience this time, it was definitely of the mind-to-mind sort and involved only the physical stimuli of hearing. Louis packed his best pair of ear plugs.

Louis did not trust the police files on the Foster family murders. They were too vague and indecisive. A good place to start investigating would be in Hoboken. All he needed was one lead to get him started.

Upon arriving in Hoboken, he set himself up in an average hotel, so as not to attract attention. He sat in his room watching Fantasy Island, good, mindless entertainment to clean weapons by.

At about 1:00 a.m. he crawled unseen out his second floor window and dropped to the ground. It was about a mile to the cemetery where the Foster family plot was, making it very easy for Louis to walk.

It was a small cemetery surrounded by a rock wall and filled with graffiti-marred gravestones, Some of the markers weren't even there. He hoped this was not true of the graves he was interested in finding.

An orange glow above one of the headstones caught Louis' eye. "Damn kids have nowhere better to smoke." He ducked down and crept slowly toward the grave. Then with one motion he stood up, drew his gun, and shouted "Boo!" The three teenagers looked at him, shocked, but one managed to speak.

"We was just leavin', Mister."

"Next time, don't go sleeping on my Aunt Ellie's grave. She doesn't take kindly to strangers. Now get your butts out of here unless you plan to stay for a long time."

After the kids were gone, Louis went to investigate the graves. There was something wrong with them. At first Louis didn't know what, but suddenly he realized it was the flowers. The files said there were no living relatives. Perhaps a friend had put them there. Louis lifted the flowers and saw the card in the middle of the bunch. He took it out and read it in the moonlight. REST IN PEACE LOUIS DRAKE.

His eyes darted around the yard. Then he saw it, the shadow of a man. Judging from the angle, he must be huge, about seven feet tall. Lois fumbled in his pockets for his earplugs. The man began to walk toward him. He got one in his left ear and fired his gun at the dark figure. He stopped walking. Louis was relieved to get his right ear plugged. He ran toward the man and knocked him into the door of a mausoleum, which crumbled with age. The man below him opened his mouth wide and smiled. Louis hit the man with the butt of his gun, knocking him unconscious. Standing up, Louis suddenly realized something was moving. He was surrounded by corpses, all walking toward him.

IV

Once before, in Peru, Louis had met up with Zombies, the walking dead. He knew what he had to do. He had learned it from a demonologist friend of his.

He punched at one of the zombies stomachs and it exploded with brown powder, much like the kind inside a mushroom when you kick it. This stung his eyes, but he reached deeper into the zombies's body, snapping the spine, and returning it to eternal rest. After repeating this with the others, he looked for his adversary. He was gone, as Louis knew he would be.

At least Louis knew what his assailant looked like— wide face, probable Cuban or South American, with long white teeth. He did a sketch when he returned to his hotel room, and then he took a shower.

The next day a visit to the local library provided the information he needed. From a newspaper dated December 12, 1973, he learned that the twenty-year old daughter of mob leader Raymond Gold was killed by a hit-and-run driver. On December 13, 1973, the Foster family was killed with a wood hatchet owned by John Foster.

Louis couldn't believe that the police had been unable to make the connection. The mob obviously had. John Foster was the killer of Linda Gold but not of his own family.

Assuming the hit-and-run was an accident, Louis now had the motive for the killings. Now he needed proof. Getting a big-time mobster to confess to half a dozen murders would be easy when you knew how to do it.

"What are you doing in here?" Raymond Gold shouted.

"I've been here for quite a while. I thought that I'd wait until you were finished with what you were doing so we could talk. I've already made sure your henchmen wouldn't disturb us.

"My name is Louis Arthur Drake. I have here a typed confession in which you admit to the Foster family killings. Care to sign it for me so you'll live a little longer?"

"Get out of here now, and I'll make sure you die in a more pleasant manner." At this, Louis pulled his gun, jumped up and pressed the nozzle close to Raymond Gold's nose.

"As you can see, I'm real frightened. Sign."

Suddenly the speaker on the wall clicked. "Mr. Drake," came the voice with the South American accent, "My name is Prafa Bala; however, I've been called many things. "I suggest you listen to what I have to say. A friend of mine is across the street watching everything you do. He will relate to me if you do not do as I say. Now, release my employer and sign you own name to that confession. After doing so, you can put your gun to your own face."

Louis walked to the window and casually gave the building across the street the finger. He then pulled the curtain.

"Mr. Drake you are forcing me to make a public address annoucement which will ensure the death of everyone in this building." The voice over the speaker had grown louder.

Realizing what the next word would be, Louis pulled down hard on the fire alarm in Gold's office, sending a loud ringing throughout the building. Before he had time to move, machine gun fire shattered the window and filled the room, striking both himself and Gold. He crawled toward the mobster. "Sign it." Ray signed it and Louis moved for the door, but not fast enough. A shot barely missed his head. "Damn it, where'd he pull that gun from?" thought Louis as he noticed Ray's hand shaking uncontrollably. That arm must have about eight bullets in it. It was then that Louis put another one right between his eyes.

The stairs were crowded with escaping residents of the building, but Louis managed to reach the main office in about thirty seconds. He put in his earplugs.

The office was strewn with bodies, innocent victims of Prafa Bala. Then he saw Prafa hiding behind a desk. Pretending not to see him, Louis lunged at the desk, trapping Prafa beneath it. Louis jumped up and down on it, snapping the fiend's bones. Prafa's face looked up at Louis, shouting as loud as he could.

"You telling me to die, old boy. You're gonna hafta speak up." he crammed his gun in Prafa's mouth, choking him. Someone with this sort of power over life and death should not be allowed to live.

"Die!" shouted Louis, and the warm blood felt good against his face.

Epilogue

Adam,

Thanks for a fun one. Enclosed find a signed confession to several unsolved murders and also my bill for services rendered.

Also, please send bail money. This one will take some explaining. Sorry I made such a mess out here.

EVITA
By Chris Kelley

If you enjoy a glittering, stirring, and altogether fascinating musical, you won't want to miss Evita. . . now running at the Shubert Theater. Evita tells the story of the life of Eva Peron, an illegitimate child of the humblest of beginnings who, solely through her own driving ambition, clawed her way to becoming the most powerful woman Argentina had ever seen.

The play opens in an Argentinian movie house, where the audience is watching a western movie on a large screen. Suddenly, the film is interrupted by an announcement that Eva Peron had that day, "entered immortality." Within seconds, the Buenos Aires cinema is transformed into Eva's majestic funeral. The grief-stricken Argentinians chant and march solemnly, paying homage to Evita. The sole non-participant is Che, who, throughout Eva's funeral, tries to tell the people of the real Eva Peron, an actress who used her mediocre theatrical talents to further herself politically.

The author employs the character of Che Guevara as a device to keep the audience aware of reality, often shrouded by the glittering curtain of the Peron administration. Che's character is the only significant diversion from the facts in Evita. Though Che Guevara did really exist, it seems unlikely that he and Eva Peron ever met. His frustration with the way that the Perons ravaged the economy of a once flourishing nation was one of the main reasons he joined Castro's regime in Cuba.

Derin Altay gives a memorable performance as Eva Peron. She is a magnificent actress, singer, and dancer. Eva Peron is not seen as she truly is, ruthless and wildly ambitious, until the second act. The first act shows her as a poor misfit who doesn't know her place in society. In the second act, however, Miss Altay's extraordinary talents are really put to use. The opening song of the second act is a compelling speech that Evita makes to her people, Don't Cry for Me, Argentina. This is a manipulative effort on the part of the dramatist to give a different view of Evita. Until this time, she appears to be a ruthlessly ambitious woman who destroyed a nation. Now we see her in a different light, as a woman who wished only to improve the lives of her people, the members of Argentina's destitute working class. By presenting these two drastically different views of Evita, the dramatist toys with the emotions of the audience, leaving them confused as to which is the real Evita. It takes a truly skillful actress to emote these feelings of confusion, and Miss Altay is able to do this superbly.

Intramural Writing Competition

R. Michael Baker plays the role of Che masterfully and dynamically. He is a superb performer who has the energy it takes to play this kinetic role. He skillfully conveys the feelings of rage and frustration felt by the young revolutionary, whose character is nearly as important as that of Evita herself. Robb Alton performs adequately as Juan Peron, Eva's husband, the President of Argentina. Though it is he who holds the official title, Peron is, in reality, Eva's sidekick, often reluctant to press onward, but always forced to succeed by the ever-ambitious Eva. Though the part of Peron does hot require an excessively strong voice, Alton insists on talk-singing his way through his role. In doing so, he often loses the tempo, and must slow down or speed up to pick it up again. He employs an Argentinian accent, (the only major character to do so), but slips in and out of it throughout the play.

The smaller parts and the chorus are an energetic group. David Dannehl gives an impressive performance as Agustin Magaldi, a tango singer who was the first of many men to be used by Eva Peron. Jill Geddes performs briefly but well as Peron's mistress, evicted from his flat by Eva.

Evita was written by Tim Rice and Andrew Lloyd Webber, the team who also wrote Jesus Christ Superstar. The rock opera style employed in Superstar is also successfully implemented in Evita. They use the full orchestra more, and rely less on the guitar in Evita, however, producing a sound more pleasing to the ear. Webber and Rice rarely resort to mere space-filling in Evita; the material in every song is almost always relevant to the play. Some parts become tedious, but, for the most part, the play remains interesting. Evita is music from beginning to end, (with the exception of three brief spoken parts).

Evita's elaborate choreography and innovative set enhance its merit. The pieces of the set are extremely versatile and movable, so that the scene can change instantly before the audience's eyes. Set designers Tazeena Firth and Timothy O'Brien cleverly use a large screen to present images of the real Eva Peron and her life. Larry Fuller's choreography is marvelous. His delightfully imaginative steps include stiffly marching Argentinian officers and prancing high society members. The play's technical elements make Evita an even better play. This gripping, powerful story of this remarkable woman will leave you awestruck as you leave the theatre.

Why Charity is Harmful—Even Cruel

By Ellie Havlin

On the surface, charity is seen as only a good thing. Churches and civic organizations preach it, and so we are brought up to believe that it is right. Indeed, many people are helped by charity every day. People that would have otherwise gone without a necessity of life— food, shelter, clothing. As one digs deeper, though, flaws are apparent. For some people, charity is a way of justifying wrongs in their own lives. Also, charity stifles some recipients. The recipients feel badly at having to receive it and therefore have low opinions about themselves. Finally, charity gives the donor a feeling of power which is destructive to both parties. Charity is sometimes harmful and even cruel because it uplifts the benefactor and degrades the recipient.

Charity can make the person giving it feel as if he has made up for some sin he has committed. He may feel that donating one hundred dollars to the SPCA will make up for kicking the dog. People can tend to forget that the reason for charity is to help people or societies that need it, not to make themselves feel better. What perpetuates this is that some organizations will say that by giving to their cause, you are in fact helping yourself. For example, by giving to the cancer fund, you can wipe out cancer before you have a chance to get it. Of course, there should be happiness when you know you're helping somebody, but there shouldn't be the same satisfaction when a person is helping himself. No matter how much good it does, charity should not be used as a penance.

Charity can make the recipient feel out of control. This is especially cruel because the person knows that the reason he's receiving charity is that he can't provide for himself. In our society, that is frowned upon. It's a Catch-22 situation for some people. If they do accept charity, they may be looked upon as being weak. However, if they don't take it, they may not survive. Charity always puts the receiver into an ambivalent role. For some, it means never changing in that role and having a poor self-image for the rest of their lives. Some people would rather go hungry than be looked down on by a society in which charity can produce the exactly opposite result from that which it intends to relieve. No one can say that the term "charity case" is meant in a nice way. This term reflects how people really view those in need.

Perhaps the worst aspect of charity is the power felt by those who give it. These people often have a distorted view of their own strength and morality. They need to re-establish this self-aggrandizing view by donating their money to someone less fortunate. By doing this they are showing the world how lucky they happen to be in terms of money. After all, having the wing of a hospital named after you because of a donation can be a very "humble" experience! Charity is used to satisfy some very large egos. What's most harmful is that the recipients of the donations are often overlooked in the process. Of course, these ideas are not applicable to every situation which is a good thing. Because when money is held in higher regard than the people it might help, it can definitely be said that charity is cruel.
